

2003 Barossa Grenache 'The Fifth Wave'

Fruit sourced from our own "Jackaman's" 60 year old Lyndoch vineyard, dry grown low yielding and extremely intense, as well as fruit from a brilliant 80 year old patch of bush vines belonging to one of our growers Wally Krieg, is blended to produce this amazing, bold and complex wine.

This is a deep, dark, powerful wine which, after two years maturation in two year old American and French oak hogsheads and barriques, has developed into an intense cherries and chocolate wine with nuances of earthy spice and the typical, chalky Grenache tannin finish.

Like 'The Freedom' Shiraz, 'The Fifth Wave' Grenache is made using minimal handling techniques and is bottled after careful racking without fining or filtration.

Colour: Medium Red with Crimson Hues

Aroma: Lifted red cherry, raspberry fruits and fine chocolate with hints of white pepper, game and savoury hues.

Palate: The complexities of the aroma flow to the full palate with berry fruits and chocolates being the dominant flavours. The finish is long, fruitful and peppery, with typical chalky Grenache tannins.
